START ME UP
YOUR HAMBURG GUIDE
Large cities around the world are the first to experience topical developments and to face issues of the future. This also enables them to identify problems at an earlier stage and to develop solutions that help shape technological change in a positive way and improve people’s lives.

Hamburg is one of the most attractive and dynamic economic regions in Europe. The city is home to virtually all branches of the economy. Our port is one of the largest in Europe and serves as a global hub for maritime logistics. Hamburg is a strong location for the healthcare sector, the aviation industry as well as the media and creative industries.

Here in Hamburg, business and science are working hand in hand. Major international research institutions such as DESY, European XFEL and ZAL are based here. Hamburg offers an ideal environment for developing new technologies and products. The European Commission has awarded Hamburg the title of Innovation Leader.

Hamburg is an excellent location for nascent entrepreneurs with clever ideas. More than 700 startup businesses are based here, with almost half of their total staff coming from abroad. Founders can benefit from Hamburg’s cosmopolitan flair, a high quality of life and optimum conditions for setting up a business.

This brochure is aimed at providing you with an overview of Hamburg as a business location and the numerous opportunities to gain a foothold in the city.

I would like to wish you every success with your ideas.

The Free and Hanseatic City of Hamburg is both a municipality and a city state within the Federal Republic of Germany. There is no distinction between these administrative tasks, meaning that city-wide government is organised at state level through the Hamburg State Parliament (Bürgerschaft).

So here’s Hamburg at a glance:

- Richest German federal state in terms of GDP per capita (2017: €94,279)
- 1.8 m inhabitants
- 36 higher education institutions
- Third largest seaport in Europe
- Germany’s second largest city and one of Germany’s 16 federal states (Bundesländer)
- Government is divided into legislative, executive and judicial powers
- Hamburg has seven districts or “Bezirke”, which are governed from their respective district offices.

Hamburg is a major international trade, transport and services hub and one of the most important locations for industry in Germany. Global players such as Airbus, Beiersdorf (Nivea), Hapag-Lloyd, Helm, Montblanc, Olympus, Otto and Tchibo are located here. Ten of the strongest 100 German businesses in terms of turnover have their head offices in Hamburg. The city’s diversified economy allows start-ups to collaborate with established businesses and to take advantage of a wide array of incentives to develop innovative solutions.

Hamburg’s innovation landscape is characterised by great diversity. Hamburg takes a prominent position within numerous fields of technology, such as civil aviation, wind power, laser and X-ray technology as well as port logistics. Hamburg is thus more diversified than many other large cities and at the same time highly specialised.

The city on the River Elbe provides unique collaboration opportunities, with a strong economy, a broad range of industries as well as excellent scientific institutions and relevant application and transfer initiatives. From basic research and test fields to market launch, Hamburg can provide professional partners for literally every step in the innovation process.

Hamburg is an attractive location for growing startups: comprising 96,000 businesses, the services sector is Hamburg’s strongest industry. With a share of approx. 34%, the information and communication segment, including leading advertising and online marketing companies such as Facebook, Facelift, Google, Smaato and Twitter, is particularly important.
Hamburg has a policy of promoting the city’s strongest economic clusters and is home to the following cluster initiatives:

The strongest economic sectors

Hamburg has a policy of promoting the city’s strongest economic clusters and is home to the following cluster initiatives:
In Hamburg you say “Moin” – which basically means “Hello”. You can use it at any time of the day or night. In the rest of Germany, Hamburg’s residents are considered to be a rather cool-headed and reserved bunch – but really, we’re not that bad once you’ve gotten to know us.

Hamburg’s business culture is still heavily influenced by the city’s Hanseatic legacy, and the city’s locals have always valued the toil of manual workers such as port workers and market vendors.

Hamburg is not only home to global players such as Airbus, Facebook, Google and Nivea, but also provides excellent opportunities for the perfect after-work experience – e.g. in the legendary St Pauli neighbourhood. Even the Beatles kicked off their music career in Hamburg.
Hamburg has more bridges than Amsterdam, Venice and London taken together (around 2,500).

The clock on the church tower of St Michael’s Church has a diameter of 8 metres, and each hand has a weight of 130 kg.

Hamburg is said to have only 133 rainy days per year (and thus 40 less than Munich).

A study concluded that Hamburg’s residents are very happy, and even happier than people in Rome, London or Paris.

Hamburg’s town hall has more rooms than Buckingham Palace. Recently they even discovered an additional room, when a state employee moved a bookshelf in his office.

Around 251 people move to Hamburg each day.

Fun facts
Before your arrival
If you’re planning on coming to Hamburg to live and work, you should be aware of any applicable visa and entry requirements. Please note that different rules may apply, depending e.g. on whether you are a citizen of a country within the European Union, the European Economic Area, and Switzerland, or a citizen of any other world region.

Visa and entry requirements

- EU/EFTA citizens
  - A valid passport is required.
  - EU citizens and citizens of Iceland, Liechtenstein, Norway and Switzerland do not need a residence permit.

- Non-EU/EFTA citizens
  - A valid passport is required.
  - Nationals of Australia, Israel, Japan, Canada, the Republic of Korea, New Zealand and the United States are allowed to enter without a visa.

- Third-country citizens
  - A valid passport is required.
  - Must apply for a visa from their local German mission abroad before travelling to Germany.

- Non-EU/EFTA-citizens – residence permit
  - A valid passport is required.
  - Permit is intended for a temporary stay and granted for a specific reason.
  - There are two titles that govern entry and residence in Germany for all non-EU citizens: the settlement permit (Niederlassungserlaubnis) and the residence permit (Aufenthaltserlaubnis).

- The EU Blue Card
  - The EU Blue Card helps highly qualified third-country nationals to immigrate to Germany permanently.

Consulates in Hamburg

GTAI German Trade and Invest

It is recommended that you start the application process for an entry visa, residence permit or work permit at an early stage as it may take several months to complete. Typically, a visa has to be applied for in person at the German diplomatic mission in or closest to your home country. If you’re a citizen of an EU or EEA country, you have the right to live, work and study in Germany without any visa or permits.

It’s advisable to have some knowledge of the German language before moving to Hamburg. A basic understanding of the language and the ability to introduce yourself in German not only makes daily life easier, it also helps with practical matters such as filling out official forms and setting up a bank account.

Health insurance is mandatory for anyone taking up residence in Germany. Making sure you’re adequately covered before you arrive in Hamburg is your own responsibility. If you’re an employee or student, you will most likely be insured as part of the German statutory social insurance system.
Where do I stay in Hamburg?

This section provides you with useful information on Hamburg’s districts and on how to find a home during your stay.

IMPORTANT
Being a city state, Hamburg’s real estate market is very dense, and especially short-term rentals can be difficult to find. You are therefore advised to start looking for accommodation as early as possible.

- Hamburg’s districts
- Finding a home
- Living in Hamburg

Relatively cheap and yet with good public transport connection: the districts of Harburg, Barmbek, Lokstedt, Wilhelmsburg...

More “hip” and expensive are the Schanzenviertel ("Schanze") district, Altona, Ottensen...
On your arrival
Setting up a bank account (Girokonto) is not difficult, but does take some planning. The easiest way is to walk into a bank office and schedule an appointment. Be sure to bring your passport, residence permit, proof of residence (Meldebescheinigung) as well as any documents stating that you are a student, an employee or entrepreneur.

In order to open a bank account it is necessary that you speak either German or English. Otherwise you may want to ask a professional interpreter to accompany you as the relevant forms will have to be completed in either German or English.

For the contract to be concluded, the CEO of your company is required to show his national ID card or passport to the relevant bank or an authorised third party. Therefore, it is highly recommended that your CEO is in Germany at the time of the opening of your bank account. In addition, you are required to bring a copy of the ID cards/passports of the partners of your startup business. The bank will also need information regarding the source of income of every partner who holds more than 10% of your company (direct and indirect shares). Moreover, you should make sure that your business model is easily comprehensible.

Cash in Germany

Germans pay cash for almost everything, and in many places cash is the only option. In fact, Germany continues to be one of the world’s most cash-intensive advanced economies (roughly 80% of all retail transactions in Germany are conducted in cash).

In many cases, you will not be able to pay with your debit or credit card, and the number of international ATMs is very limited. Therefore, it is recommended that you carry a reasonable amount of cash in your wallet at any time.

Further information about banking
German mobile phone plan: prepaid or contract?

If you’re planning to stay in Hamburg for only a few months, it might be wise to get a prepaid card for your mobile phone. It certainly brings less perks but after all, you just need a way to be reachable during your stay. Prepaid cards offer all the basics like a phone number as well as calls and texts billed per minute or per text, and most providers will also supply you with a sufficient amount of data volume. However, if you intend to stay for more than 12 months and you need a large volume of mobile internet, you’d better go for a regular contract. If you are planning to stay long-term, you can even get a new phone with your contract.

Moreover, you should be aware that in Germany all SIM cards are sold separately. Therefore, you should make sure to have your phone unlocked before getting a contract. Otherwise, you won’t be able to reuse your phone with the new SIM card.

The option of getting a “SIM card only” contract

In Germany it is also possible to go for a “SIM card only” contract. This option probably suits you when you already have your own phone and you only need the service (but not a prepaid card with credit). While all major providers offer the “SIM card only” option, packages and deals may vary greatly. Therefore, you are advised to choose carefully.

Language courses
In order to make your stay more fun and comfortable, we recommend that you attend German language classes, e.g. at one of the following institutes:

Goethe-Institut

The Goethe-Institut offers German language courses with a focus on speaking, listening, reading and writing. You can choose between intensive courses and evening courses. The Goethe-Institut also offers an internationally recognised German language exam for all levels of proficiency (A1–C2).

Hamburger Volkshochschule

Hamburger Volkshochschule (VHS) offers daytime and evening classes for German as a foreign language as a preparation for the Goethe-Institut language exam.
Getting around
Mobility and shopping

Public transport

- Hamburger Verkehrsverbund (HVV) is the local public transport provider within the Hamburg municipality.

- More information about HVV ticket prices

The HVV app is very helpful for searching connections and buying tickets online.

Bike sharing

StadtRAD is a German bike sharing platform. It is available in several cities across Germany. For more information, visit stadtrad.hamburg.de

Grocery shopping

As a rule, retail shops in Germany are open Monday to Saturday from 8:00 am to 8:00 pm. Yet there are also a number of shops with longer opening hours. Hamburg has quite a broad range of supermarkets on offer, and some of these are listed below.

Every neighbourhood has at least one weekly market where locals can stock up on fresh fruit, vegetables, meat, cheese, bread – and perhaps enjoy some chitchat with the neighbours. Most markets take place in the mornings and early afternoons, though some are open throughout the day.
